Asia is rice and rice is Asia. If the golden wheat fields are the bread basket of Europe, then the flooded paddy yields are the rice bowl of Asia. In fact, the orient is the rice bowl of the world. For the tiny chalky grains that pour in from China, India, Pakistan, Burma, Thailand, Korea and Japan make up 70 percent of the world's production and feed half the world's population.

And on the supplies of grains hinges the wealth, health and happiness of the teeming millions of Asians. Not only does rice forms our principal diet, but the by-products are put to numerous uses. Rice straw, for instance, is used as cattle food, fuel, fertilizers, roof thatching and also to make paper, footwear and baskets. That is why the rice plant is so precious and sacred.

According to legend, it was during a famine in China, many years ago that the rice first come into the lives of the Asians. A little girl went for fishing. But instead of fish, she caught in her net the king of the frogs. The king told her to holdout the net to the sunbeams, while he sang a song. The golden sunbeams turned into small grains. The little girl gathered a harvest of rice. The same rice, in due course, had become the seeds.

- What are the uses of rice straw?
- What did the little girl catch?

- The staple food of Europe is ____ []
[a] rice [b] wheat [c] millets

Once there lived a rich merchant. He had one constant worry. His handsome son fell in to bad company. He soon formed various bad habits.

One day suddenly an idea came in to merchant's mind. He brought a dozen fresh ripe apples. He told his son to put them in a basket. One of the apples was rotten. He pointed out it to his father. But, the merchant told him to put it also among the good apples. It was evening - so, the father told his son to keep the basket aside. They would eat the apples next day.

The basket of the apples was opened the next morning. All the apples turned bad and spoiled all other apples. He told his son that this was the result of bad company.

The father's words went straight to the boy's heart. He gave up bad company.

Now arrange the following jumbled sentences in sequential order basing on the story.

- The merchant's son gave up bad company.
- All the apples turned bad and rotten..
- The merchant's son fell into bad company.
